

A travelogue (as they are referred to on TravelPod) was a term we began to use in 1997 to describe personal travel websites which our members have been enjoying ever since we opened our doors.

These days, as "blog" has become more of a main stream term, these personal travel websites have been slowly adopting the term Travel Blog. It's all very confusing but the bottom line is that it's all the same.

A travelogue is essentially a web site where travelers post their travel experiences, travel maps, photos, and thoughts. Think of it as a traveler's very own piece of Cyber Space where their trips can be shared with their family, friends and fellow travelers.

It is the modern day's equivalent to the traditional paper diary in which travelers have chronicled their experiences for centuries.

It's fairly complicated for a traveler to setup their own web site with all of this functionality, so TravelPod put together the first Internet web service back in 1997 to allow its members to easily create and update personal travel websites (or travelogues) for free.

Travelogues can also be a great way to stay in touch while traveling. Friends and family can be emailed notifications of updates to a travelogue which can save travelers a lot of time which is typically spent bulk emailing loved ones back home.

Call it what you like, Travelogues, Travel Blogs, Travel Journals or Travel Diaries are here to stay. Creating your own and updating it with your travels has become an exciting way to share and chronicle travel adventures.

Travel Blogs are a travelers best friend! Make sure to create one on your next trip!

"My husband and I love MyTripJournal. We took a trip of a lifetime to Europe for 4 months and the website was our single way of keeping in contact with friends and family. Everyone raved about the site – content and the usability of the site."
